

1. The idea I have for my site is a personal portfolio of hobbies and current updates about me.
2. Having a personal portfolio would allow other people to see what skills I am capable of to seek me out as a potential prospect for their job or allow friends and family to see what I am up to in my current everyday life. The website homepage would be a central page to showcase the different aspects of the website. It could work in a linear fashion of going page to page to show the user what the page would be or allow the user to jump to specific pages.
3. Persona #1: Potential hirers for future jobs; people who are looking to hire someone and want to see what a candidate would offer. Would be a person actively seeking out a specific set of skills and gauge whether the site owner would be a good fit. Very business oriented, not someone who is looking to be friends with the person they are trying to reach out to.
Persona #2: Friends and family; people within a social circle who want to stay connected to a specific person because they are no longer in immediate contact with that person or want to see what they are putting out there.
4. <https://www.davidmilan.com/>
<https://www.laurabaross.com/>

Shorthand flow

Wireframe

comp

Home

Skills

Hobbies

Contact

Who am I?

I am a senior at MSU studying
Media and Info
with tech experience